EXTRA PAY FOR SHARPSHOOTERS

THE annual report of Lieutenant Colonel F. S. Dodge, Chief Paymaster of the East, contains a recommendation which has frequently been endorsed by army officers in regard to the pay of expert marksmen. Colonel Dodge says that it has always seemed to him that sharpshooters in the infantry and cavalry arms of the service should have the encouragement of added pay for their skill, which is the result of special interest and practice. If the men are willing to apply themselves and perfect their marksmanship, they should have the reward, and at the same time there should be an incentive for the whole body of enlisted men to improve if they can.

He recommends an increase of a dollar a month for infantrymen and $2 a month for cavalrymen. A soldier who can hit the mark, in Colonel Dodge's opinion, is well worth the added cost. The small amount proposed as pay for marksmanship would, he thinks, serve to stimulate throughout the whole army greater interest in target practice, and bring out the best men at once.

No recommendation for the encouragement of rifle practice in the National Guard could be employed at so small an expense to the State with greater results. It is not a new suggestion but an old one, made by many of our former regimental commanders and endorsed by general officers without number. Colonel Robert Ralston, in his annual report for 1898 made a particularly strong plea recommending extra pay for qualified marksmen, as also did many others the same year. How can the details of the service be bettered than through the advice of its most experienced officers.

We must never forget that under the rude test of war, if we wish to obtain even a small result in the field, it is necessary to demand much in peace.

Napoleon I said: "Fire is everything, the rest is of small account," and to-day, accurate firing or quality firing, is of more importance than the mere quantity of it. Superiority of fire is to be obtained more by a rational and good tactical use of the rifle than by any actual superiority of armament (though this latter consideration must be given its full weight). Other things being equal, the better the rifle and its ammunition, the greater will be the effects of the fire.

It is the inherent impressionable character of the nature of man that may, and often has, upset the most matured plans and resolutions. One of the great objects of military training, is to so strengthen a man's natural moral qualities by the iron bands of discipline, and by the groove that custom and habit induce them to move in voluntarily, that they may become more of a fixed quantity under all circumstances, than a fluctuating one.

This object can only be attained by constant training and practice in what should be done in the field, and this is all the more necessary, because knowledge, and the application of that knowledge, are two totally different things. Knowledge is comparatively easy to attain; the application of it is hard. The former has first to be gained by study; the latter, which is the real key-note of success in war, can then only be learnt by constant practice.

In order to further encourage our soldiers in the application of the knowledge of "how to shoot a rifle," we must give them a just material compensation for their most important ability to "shoot to kill."

MILITARY LAW AND ITS TRIBUNALS

BY
COLONEL JOHN I. ROGERS
Former Judge Advocate General of National Guard of Pennsylvania

When, therefore, to the difficulties thus besetting those eminent officials were added the others, emanating from the code of a co-ordinate sovereignty, that was, at times subordinate and imitative, and at times repugnant, it became a subject of surprise, that irreconcilements of interpretation between officials connected with the National Guard of Pennsylvania were not the rule, instead of happily, as they turned out to be, the exception.

These difficulties not only perplexed the unlearned-in-the-law line officers, but confused the experienced officials of the department itself. While the latter differed on various minor points, they all agreed that the uniformity, brevity and simplicity in practice, so essential to a proper administration of justice, could not be obtained without an entirely new code, or at least an amendment to that portion relating to courts martial, their jurisdiction and procedure. In response to the oft-repeated urgent requests of the Judge Advocate General, a military board was convened in December, 1886, which, after weeks of patient investigation of existing law and its defects and the necessary remedial measures, evolved a codification into one statute of twenty former Acts of Assembly, which it specifically repealed, and which, with much new matter became the Act of April 13, 1887, known as the "Military Code of Pennsylvania."

It is impracticable to enumerate all the various changes and improvements to be found in that new code, but the most important of those affecting the Department of Military Justice may be thus recapitulated:

Courts of Inquiry can be instituted to investigate the conduct of any officer, either on his own solicitation or on complaint, or for settling rank. A Judge Advocate is to be detailed upon requisition duly made to the authorities ordering the court.

A General Court Martial, consisting of seven officers for the trial of general officers or of officers on the general staff, may be ordered by the Commander-in-Chief, and for the trial of all other commissioned officers, may be ordered by the division commander, to consist of five officers.

A General Court of five officers, for the trial of enlisted men, may be ordered by the brigade commander.

A regimental or Battalion Court, for the trial of enlisted men, may be ordered by the commander of a regiment or of an independent battalion, to consist of a field officer or captain.

An Unassigned Company Court, for the trial of enlisted men of such unassigned company, to be ordered by the brigade commander, to consist of a field officer or captain.

Every Court was entitled to a Judge Advocate, who, after the determination of challenges, should administer the form of oath prescribed by the statute to the members of the court before being sworn himself by the president thereof.

The jurisdiction of the General Court extends to the trial of all offences against military law, order or discipline, and their sentences include "dishonorable discharge," reduction to the ranks, a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars with an alternative in default of payment of thirty days' imprisonment.

The jurisdiction of the Regimental, Battalion or Unassigned Company Court is confined to minor offences, and its punishments limited to reprimand, forfeiture of pay, fine not exceeding twenty dollars with an alternative of five days' imprisonment. In war times, and when the Guard shall be called into the service of the United States, then the jurisdiction and punishments shall be similar to those prescribed for like courts in the Army of the United States.

Section 89 made a radical change from the old law in extending to enlisted men the privilege, formerly exclusively enjoyed by officers, of a speedy trial and of ten days' prior notice of the detail of the court and of the charges and specifications. Within fifteen days after sentence the proceedings must be reviewed and either approved or disapproved by the officer who ordered the court, with notice to the accused, who has twenty days thereafter to appeal to the Commander-in-Chief, if from a General Court, or to the officer ordering said court if an inferior court, who may remit, mitigate or commute said sentences.

Provisions are also made for the subpoenaing of witnesses and for attachments for those failing to obey such subpoenas; for the appointment of marshals to serve processes and perform other and appropriate duties.

The most important innovation on precedent was the impressment into the military service of civil executive officials to execute the processes of the courts martial. After return of the summons by the marshal certifying service on the accused and upon default of the latter's appearance "at the time and place designated for trial the president or officer of the court shall issue his warrant for the arrest of the delinquent," directed "to the sheriff or any constable of the county," who shall forthwith execute said warrant and make proper return thereof and produce to said court the body of the accused, if within the said county, and "retain the custody thereof until the conclusion of the trial, unless sooner discharged by order of the court."

If conviction ensues then, after final approval of the sentence, if it includes, as usual, a pecuniary fine, and upon default in payment thereof, the president or officer of the court issues his warrant directing "the sheriff or any constable of said county" to levy the said fine and costs on the goods and chattels of the defendant, and to have the moneys before the court on a prescribed date, or if such levy cannot be made then to return "nulla bona." Upon such return the court issues to the same official for execution a warrant of commitment of the delinquent to the proper jail of the county, the keeper or warden of which must receive and confine for the term of his sentence such delinquent when so delivered by the sheriff or constable, accompanied by proper certificate of the record.

These radical innovations on precedent, in thus enlisting the aid of civil officials to execute the processes of military courts, were not the result of whim, caprice or impulse, or for the purpose of mere experiment. The experience of years had demonstrated the absurdity, unless when in camp, of following blindly the practice of the United States Army, which was to send a corporal's squad and take the accused, at the bayonet's point, to the guard tent or court room.

Yet under the old code, that was the only way compulsory attendance could be lawfully effected. In fact the Judge Advocate General in 1884 had so advised the Commander of the Second Brigade. That distinguished officer—since governor and now a superior court judge—immediately acted upon such advice and brought a recalcitrant forcibly to the court, the summons of which he had disobeyed. It raised a newspaper storm of big dimensions. Pictorial representations of a company of soldiers, with fixed bayonets, prodding a poor wretch in citizen's attire, along the streets of a city, appeared in local newspapers with such anarchistic headlines as these:

"The Czar outczared."
"The death of the Republic."
"Military despotism the rule."
"Submission is slavery," and so on ad infinitum.

There never was the slightest doubt in the mind of any lawyer, who considered the subject, that unpopular and distasteful as such strong arm exercise of power undoubtedly was, yet, nevertheless, it was authorized by law and justified by circumstances. But as the annual appropriation, for the maintenance of the uniformed militia, depended on legislative approval of its methods, it was deemed by those highest in authority, wise or politic—particularly politic—not to run counter to public prejudice, by insisting on the law's execution in such cases.

As might have been anticipated, many miscarriages of justice followed and the payments of pecuniary fines, by those sentenced thereto, were exceptional and considered as gratuities to the State Treasury, rather than expiatory settlements. Something had to be done to rescue military tribunals from the contempt that is always grafted the civil service process plan upon their old procedure. United States army officers, especially those connected with the Department of Military Justice, have sounded its praises at all times and places, and once induced the Secretary of War to recommend that the Government avail itself of the aid of its civil officers where deserters fly beyond the sound of the bugle call.

The present Adjutant General of the United States Army, then Colonel H. C. Corbin, in his report to the Inspector General, August 5, 1890, after referring generally to our code "as one in every way worthy of consideration by the other States," adds:

"There are many things in the code deserving of special mention, one particularly, namely, the part the civil courts and civil officers play in the arrest and trial of offenders in the military service."

He then expresses the opinion that the same recourse should be taken for the arrest of deserters from the United States Army, as above adverted to.

Captain Chester, of the Third Artillery, another detailed inspecting officer, gives similar high commendation to bestowed on impotency and the responsibility to discover a remedy, fell logically upon the then Judge Advocate General, who thought out the present scheme and incorporated it into the new code. It required only a short time to familiarize the guard with those as well as the other provisions of the new code, and as a complete set of Forms of Procedure for Courts Martial, was soon afterwards formulated and promulgated in General Orders, the machinery of the new system was put in motion, smoothly and noiselessly, and has since continued its work without the slightest jar to the most susceptible member of the Peace Society. A constable in civilian clothing now arrests a military delinquent in the same attire, and escorts him to the court room, without a passer-by knowing or caring about the whys or wherefores of such an every-day promenade.

From all the States, maintaining national guards, worthy of the name, came requests for copies of the new code and of the said Forms of Procedure. Some have adopted our system intact and others in-

"The many excellent provisions in the code relating to military discipline and the methods of procedure by which the civil officers of the State are made to help the administration of military discipline. Courts martial in Pennsylvania stand upon as solid a basis as any courts of the State, and their mandates are obeyed by the civil officers promptly and exactly as the mandates of the Supreme Court."

In view of such high praise by such competent critics—and they are but a slight percentage in numbers of many making similar commendations—it is not unseemly boasting for us to maintain, that our code provides the simplest and therefore, the best judicial system yet created for military bodies.

It is not only an improvement and remedial of all previous systems extant, but in its assimilation to the civil tribunals and the execution of its processes, by the civil authorities, it has done pioneer work, far in advance, both in time and merit, of that of any other State or nation. It is not the fault of the law, or of the officers of the Department of Military Justice, that some of the provisions for its administration have been often nullified by line officers, particularly captains of companies, who, in order to get rid of objectionable enlisted men, summarily discharge them under authority of Section 34 of the code. This, under the literal reading of the section, they had an undoubted right to do, subject to the approval of their superior commanding officers, but as has been often repeatedly pointed out, such a discharge must be classified as an honorable one, according to the rulings and opinions of every military authority.

PRESENTATION OF PRIZES.

The evening of November 25th was made a gala occasion for the Ninth Regiment. It was the occasion of the presentation of the prizes offered by General Paul A. Oliver for the six companies obtaining the highest rating at the spring inspection. An audience which filled the galleries witnessed the presentation. The regimental band and companies A, C, D, E, F, I, K, L and M were paraded in full uniform.

At 8 o'clock General Gobin and staff and General Oliver took their places on the floor. After the ceremonies of evening parade the regiment passed in review before General Gobin and General Oliver. This was followed by the presentation of the prizes by General Gobin, who made an eloquent address. The officers of the winning companies were called to the front as follows, and received the company prizes:

Company A, Wilkesbarre, Captain Frank Deitrick and Lieutenants W. S. Norton and Charles Johnson; $150 and gold medal.

Company G, Hazleton, Captain Calvin Pardee, Jr., Lieutenants W. Isaac Ravert and Carl Connor; $100 and gold medal.

Company C, Pittston, Captain Charles S. Colony, Lieutenants William A. Francis and Edgar L. VanValkenberg; $62.50 and gold medal.

Company L, Nanticoke, Captain George Evans, Lieutenant George Kinklemaan, $62.50 and gold medal.

Company M, West Pittston, Captain B. S. Emery, Lieutenants William Everhardt and Walter S. Garman; $40 and gold medal.

Company D, Wilkesbarre, Captain E. D. Camp, Lieutenants William J. Weitzel and C. E. Fuerstein; $25 and gold medal.

Companies C and L, which were tie for third place, divided the cash prizes and drew lots for third place, Company C winning.

At the conclusion of the awarding of prizes Captain Dietrich was again called to the front, and General Gobin presented him with a handsome sword, the gift of the enlisted men of his company.

The officers then adjourned to the Westmoreland Club, where the annual harmony dinner of the regiment was held with the following as guests: Brig. Gen. J. P. S. Gobin, Major W. S. Millar, Major W. P. Clarke, Major S. B. Cameron, Major G. H. Halberstadt, Major W. W. Inglis, Captain F. R. Drake, Captain F. A. Snyder, General Paul A. Oliver, Colonel W. C. Price, Major J. S. Harding and Mr. W. E. Woodruff.

SECOND REGIMENT NOTES.

First Lieutenant Oliver S. Reutschler, Company H, has resigned.

The field and staff Second Infantry will appear at the next annual encampment with fair leather horse equipments.

The annual "Smashbatter" of the Old Guard Second Infantry was held on Thursday evening, December 11th, 1902, at the Alexis Club, Broad and Jefferson streets, over one hundred and fifty guests being present.

The Second Regiment has arranged for a monster benefit to be given at the Grand Opera House, beginning January 19 and running the entire week. The play will be the military drama "Shenandoah," which will be presented by the members of the Grand Opera Stock Company and by members of the regiment. In order to make the benefit a grand success the management of the Grand Opera House have introduced many new features, and in the final act will present an entire new scene, the review of the troops by President Lincoln at the close of the war, when the regiment will participate. The benefit is expected to be a grand financial success.

Lieutenant Colonel Geo. M. Halstead, assistant commissary general on the staff of the commander-in-chief, is peculiarly fitted for the departmental staff owing to long experience in railroading, being formerly associated with his father, Wm F. Halstead, of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad. Colonel Halstead is greatly interested in the welfare of the Guard, and is prominent and popular among the rank and file of the Thirteenth Infantry. The several line officers in this organization are particularly loud in their praise for the many kindnesses and encouragement Colonel Halstead had given them on many occasions.

THE praise bestowed by Major Duvall, Artillery Corps, U. S. A., upon the National Guard of Pennsylvania is thoroughly deserved, and it is very solidly appreciated by the rank and file of the Guard. In past years there has been an effort to decry the Pennsylvania soldiers. Every time that the Division paraded at an inauguration, in Washington, there has followed a string of lies, published broadcast, in which the soldiers from the Keystone State were pictured as veritable thugs. Official inquiries which were had to investigate these allegations, invariably found but little upon which to hang such stories. But the mischief was done. The newspapers of other States, which published the lies, never bothered themselves to make public the exoneration.

It is to be hoped that Major Duvall's report will be given wide publicity. It may hurt some of the other States to have it officially declared that the N. G. P. is the best in the land, but it is the truth, and that it is the best has long been known to close observers.

THERE seems to be a decided objection to so much gold lace on the new full dress army cap, and it is semi-officially reported that the embroidery on the visor will be discarded. Many of the officers have already purchased the new headgear, and at present are seeking to effect exchanges from the several military dealers for the cap which has been finally adopted.

THE National Guard Association of Philadelphia seems inclined to be conservative and insular. When this association was organized it was the hope that live matters pertaining to the well being of the Guard would be taken up, and that efforts for proper legislation would be pressed. Instead, there seems to be a disposition to discuss dead matter, otherwise Utopian subjects. At the present time the Association should earnestly take up those matters which injure the Guard and prepare laws which will do away with the possibilities of such injury. There is the matter of unauthorized parties wearing the uniform of the Guard; there are these so-called independent military organizations, armed and equipped, mobs is a more proper designation, because, if ever serious internal trouble comes in this State, the arms owned by these irresponsible people will be found in the hands of the lawbreakers, and many a guardsman will be aware of that fact through injuries received. There should be a strong restrictive measure covering all such organizations. Then there is that question of suitable armories to be owned and controlled by the State and of the hostility of organized labor to the Guard. Here be good, live, strong, vital matters. Much better for the Guard is the discussion of such subjects than trying to limit the time of the Guard in active service and the formation of regimental bands.

THE State of Pennsylvania does absolutely nothing for its commissioned officers, while other States make an appropriation to each officer, out of which he is required to keep himself properly uniformed and equipped.

A number of changes have been made in the uniform and equipment of the regular army, as published in General Order No. 81. Many of these will, in time, be adopted by the State of Pennsylvania and its officers required to make the change. In view of the fact that the late tour of duty in the coal regions has made it necessary for many officers to purchase portions of a new equipment and also the fact that many changes are being made in the personnel of the officers of the Guard, this seems to be the proper time to promulgate such changes in equipment.

It is unjust to the newly elected officer to require him to outfit himself with the old equipment when a change is in contemplation. It is equally unjust to the officer now in commission to compel him to discard good uniforms and equipment which he may have on hand.

It seems that the proper procedure in this matter would be for the Adjutant General to determine what changes are to be made and announce them, giving officers at least one year in which to wear out what they may now be using. Such an order dated January 1, 1903, and giving officers until January 1, 1904, in which to make the change, would be productive of the desired result and at the same time not inconvenience the officers.

It may be objected that this would, during this one year, give a lack of uniformity to the officers of the Guard, but rather this, since the State does not foot the bill, than to do the officers who are so willingly devoting so much of their time and spending their money in the interest of the Guard, the injustice of requiring them to discard uniforms or equipment without giving them an adequate time in which to wear out what they may have.

It would be no hardship to the newly elected officer to require him to at once procure the new articles and the older officers would gradually fall into line.

THE report upon the N. G. P., by Major Duvall is the most comprehensive ever made of the Division. There is shown an insight into the workings of the Guard never before attained by an officer detailed for the purpose by the War Department. Major Duvall is a thorough soldier as is evident from his comments. He was keen to note everything happening in the camp, and wherever he noted a fault he has set it forth clearly.

As to his recommendations for the betterment of the Guard, which gives, as he says, reluctantly, as the present system has already produced such excellent results, each of the seven paragraphs is well worthy of serious consideration. First he recommends that the period of the annual encampment be at least doubled. This desideratum has often been considered, but in a purely volunteer service it is difficult to have men, of the material most desired in the Guard, to give more than eight days from business. There is no question as to the good which would result from an encampment lasting at least two weeks. But the Guard is composed of professional and business men, to whom such a long period away from their various vocations would be very detrimental.

The second recommendation, that the entire Guard be armed with the army magazine rifles needs no endorsement here. It has long been a matter of unknown quantity—the reasons why the War Department persists in allowing the State troops only obsolete weapons.

There is no question that the elective system of officers has much to condemn it. The Major recommends its utter abolishment, as, he says, it is abhorrent to enduring excellence in any military organization. And yet in such a service as that of volunteers the danger in abolishing the elective system and the substitution of the appointive would probably be that of political interference.

The reorganization of the Medical Department of the Guard, another of the Major's recommendations, is a matter which the authorities should carefully look into. At present it is believed that the department is in good shape, and it will come as a sort of a shock to have it so slightingly spoken of.

The organization of a Signal Corps has already been provided for in the laws governing the Guard, and it is up to the authorities to go ahead.

The employment of the entire Division with the Army in joint manoeuvres in the field, is something which has long been the devout wish of every officer of the Guard. This is a matter for the National Government to work out. There is land enough in Pennsylvania over which the troops could be manoeuvred with a minimum of damage. Let the War Department provide the funds and send the army here; the National Guard will do the rest.

The seventh and last recommendation that the Division of the N. G. P. should be mustered in, commanded and used as a whole, if its services are ever required by the Nation, is something that every influence possible was brought to accomplish at the outbreak of the Spanish war. But the moguls at Washington were not going to give Pennsylvania the credit that would have accrued to it if such had been the case, and the unit was dissolved, to its detriment.

The National Guard of Pennsylvania is profoundly grateful to Major Duvall for the intelligent, searching report he has made. It is proud of his praise and it respects his criticism.

Very earnestly it is to be hoped that the Major will be sent to inspect the Guard in 1903.

Personal Mention

Hospital Steward Jos. Baumeister, of the Thirteenth Infantry, the senior and old reliable steward of the Guard, is about retiring from the service. Pressure of business is given as the reason for his withdrawal.

The members of Company G, Twelfth Regiment, on November 25 presented Lieutenant Shiffler Weiss with a new army regulation handsome sword.

Lieutenant George B. Konkle, Company D, Twelfth Regiment, was the recipient of a handsome sword from the members of his company on the evening of December 1.

General Gobin says the only reason he has not denied the newspaper report that he is to retire from the National Guard is because he makes it a rule never to contradict anything the newspapers say.

Major D. S. B. Chew ordnance officer and acting inspector of rifle practice First Brigade, tendered to the members of the winning teams a delightful luncheon and entertainment on the occasion of the presentation of trophies and medals at Brigade Headquarters, City Hall, Saturday evening, December 20th. Mr. Henry Reed Hatfield, one of the donors, made a very pleasing address. General Schall and several members of his staff and military guests appeared in full uniform.

NOTES

Battery "B" will present the "Drummer Boy of Shiloh" at the Bijou Theatre, Pittsburg, the first part of June, 1903.

The Ninth Infantry (Wilkesbarre Fencibles) will hold a Fete of Nations early in April, when it is expected to realize several thousand dollars towards the armory fund.

Captain John W. Kambeck, Thirteenth Infantry, proposes to present a claim for the payment of such men constituting the camping party under his command at Gettysburg last July.

The drill and experience gained by Battery "B" at Ashland, Schuylkill county, Pa., has put confidence in the officers as to the ability of the men.

Colonel Henry A. Courson, formerly commander of the Scranton City Guard, Thirteenth Infantry, will in all probability re-enter the Guard as a member of the staff of the Commander-in-chief.

The members of Governor Stone's staff will tender to their retiring chief a formal dinner at the Hotel Bellevue on Saturday evening, January 3rd. A beautiful testimonal will be presented to His Excellency on this occasion as a token of their appreciation and esteem.

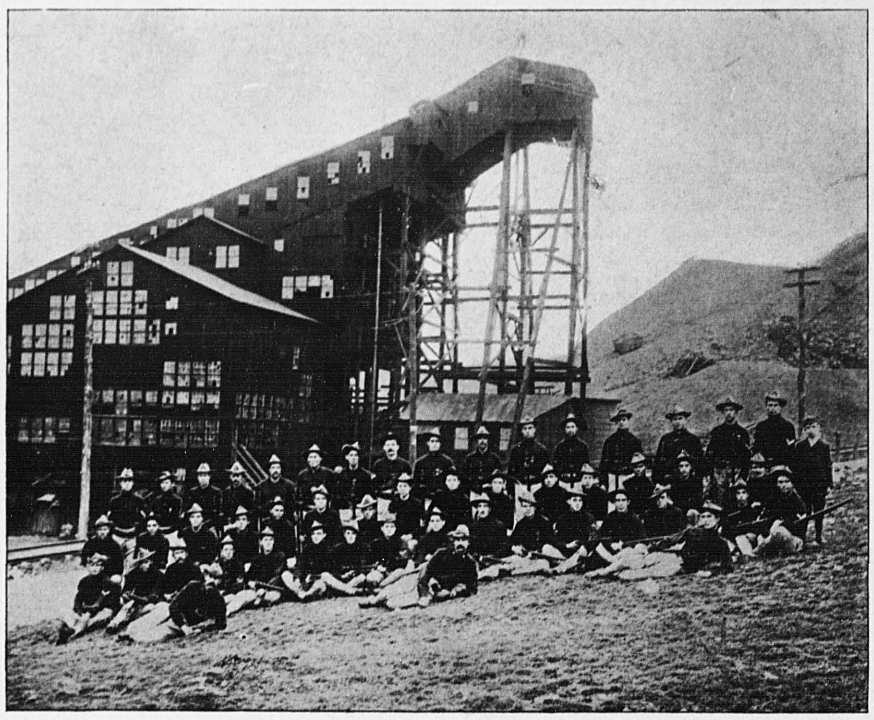
Father O'Donnell, of the Scranton diocese, has sent a letter to Colonel Louis A. Watres, Thirteenth Infantry, commending the excellent deportment and soldierly bearing of the Thirteenth while on duty at Oliphant.

Every enlisted man of the Thirteenth Regiment was supplied with a pair of rubber boots during the recent campaign in the coal regions. It is expected that the expenses of these will be borne by the State, in as much as the command incurred no expense for lumber or fuel.

The "Knocker's Club" of Colonel Coryell, Sixth Infantry, held their semi-annual banquet at the University Club on Thursday evening, December 18th. The object of this organization is to promote good fellowship and progressiveness.

Lieutenant Frederick A. Godcharles, Inspector of Rifle Practice of the Twelfth Regiment, has resigned. Lieutenant Godcharles served as a private in Company C, Twelfth Regiment, from February, 1894, to March, 1895. On December 27, 1898, he was appointed sergeant major, and on March 23, 1899, became Inspector of Rifle Practice. He served as an enlisted man in Company C, Twelfth Regiment, P. V. I., from May 12, 1898, to October 29, 1898.

An inter-company rifle contest is now scheduled for several years to come in the Fourth Infantry. First Lieutenant Robert R. Miller,



CAPT. MAURICE E. FINNEY'S COMPANY "I," 8 h INFANTRY (HARRISBURG CITY GREYS) AT SHENANDOAH

I. R. P., has presented a sterling silver loving cup, and the company winning it three consecutive seasons will become the final owner. During the service in the coal fields the several companies hotly contested for the prize. Captain Reuben C. Potteiger's Company "A" won by a good score.

Work has been started on the remodeling of the Hunt Armory, owned and controlled by the Hunt Armory Association—members and friends of Hampton Battery "B" owning most of the stock

The Armory will have a drill floor 67 feet by 67 feet, and will have officers' and men's rooms, a quartermaster's department—in fact, everything necessary to an up-to-date armory.

This Armory is named after the late Captain Alfred E. Hunt, formerly commander of the battery.

Target practice was one of the duties performed by Hampton Battery "B" while stationed at Ashland, Pa. A target nine feet long and six feet wide hung from a tree on the side of one of the spurs of the Schuylkill Mountains at a distance of 1550 yards was pierced six times and was missed by a few inches by the other six shells, twelve shells in all being used. Major L. F. Brown, of the Second Brigade Staff, presented a $5 bill to the gun squad hitting the target first.

The Dick bill, now before Congress, provides for several regiments of heavy artillery for coast defence. Possibly two of these will be selected from Philadelphia and one from the Second Brigade, likely the Sixteenth. At periods these organizations would visit different forts in their locality and be schooled and practiced in heavy ordiance. The organizations selected would continue their drill in infantry as well. It is stated that the strength of these companies would be increased to 80 men.

HEADQUARTERS AND FIRST BATTALION CAMP 4th INFANTRY, AT NANTICOKE

COL. ROBERT BRUCE RICKETTS

As a matter of historical interest several issues of each volume of "Our State Army and Navy" journal will contain short sketches and illustrations of prominent and distinguished soldiers of the rebellion. The subject of our present sketch is Colonel Robert Bruce Ricketts, a distinguished and well-known artillery officer of the Civil War. He was born April 29, 1839, at Orangeville, Columbia county, Pa., and when quite a young man enrolled himself as First Lieutenant Battery F, Pennsylvania Light Artillery, July 8, 1861. His efficiency being recognized by the War Department he was made captain May 8, 1863, and on December 1, 1864, he was commissioned major of the First Pennsylvania Light Artillery and Colonel (A. W. M.) March 5, 1865. He was honorably discharged July 3, 1865.

During the War of the Rebellion he was brevetted Lieutenant Colonel and Colonel of U. S. Volunteers March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious service. Colonel Ricketts is a prominent and representative citizen of Luzerne county, and for many years has been identified in the lumber business with Colonel Harry C. Trexler (a. d. c. on the staff of the commander-in-chief).
